33 History

The Sears Building was built in 1946 when Sears and Roebuck moved from Broughton Street, demolishing many historic properties. When Sears moved to Oglethorpe Mall the property was purchased by Chatham County in 1973 and housed the Department of Family and Children Services. The building was altered and has been vacant since 2004.

34 Historical theme(s)

35 Significance

The Old Sears building has a large visual and historically commercial presence in the ward. It has significantly impacted the development of the ward.

Victorian District | 2 E. Henry St.

The old Sears & Roebuck building, located at 2 E. Henry Street, was the first commercial building to be built in Savannah following World War II. This large steel and brick building was designed by the Atlanta architectural firm of Schultze and Armstead in the International Style. Sears & Roebuck opened on November 14, 1946. The three story building occupies lots 1, 6, 7, 12, and part of 3, 4, 9 and 13 in Cuthbert Ward, and comprises nearly 90,000 square feet. It is currently vacant and for sale.

Narrative Description

(Describe the historic and current physical appearance of the property. Explain contributing and noncontributing resources if necessary. Begin with a summary paragraph that briefly describes the general characteristics of the property, such as its location, setting, size, and significant features.)

Summary Paragraph

The Historic Sears Building is a three-level beige painted brick masonry structure done in early 20th century Commercial Style. The windows are aluminum frame on both the storefront and upper level. The building is located in the Victorian District of Savannah, Georgia. The neighborhood is primarily residential and contains many contributing historic structures, mostly from the rapid suburban growth Savannah experienced from 1871 and 1891. This building is imposing in scale compared to the smaller homes surrounding the site. Most of the buildings are 2 story frame structures. (Savannah Victorian District Design Manual n.d.) The most striking design elements of the building are the storefront rounded eaves that echoing the Streamlined Moderne style popular in the 1930's and 1940's.

Narrative Description

The Sears building is located on the northern portion of the lot and the southern portion is a parking lot as it was in the original design. It is built from steel reinforced concrete with a painted brick facing. The Sears Building measures a total of 89,488 gross square feet. The basement contains 30,070 SF, the ground level and second floors both contain 27,820 SF, and the third level contains 3,778 SF. There is a loading dock on the northeastern corner of the building. In a 2006 survey of the property, the only defect was in the flashing at the roofline but there was no evidence of leakage of other damage.

Sears original floor use included three floors and a sales basement. The top floor was to contain air-conditioning equipment and offices. The found level had an open floor plan with supporting square columns running along its entirety. All floors still have the original support columns. The lower half of the building occupied the merchandise showrooms. Sears originally had six entrances along the parking area and four entrances on the north side. The interior was designed for 200 employees. Originally, the parking area was landscaped with shrubs and flowers. The interior was elegant in style with terrazzo flooring, polished wood details, and murals on the wall. The murals were one of the building's most outstanding interior features. The renowned artist Eugene Montgomery, of Chicago, painted all the murals depicting the history of Savannah. There is no record of where the murals are currently. Sears had two elevators and one freight elevator, on the east side of the building. This freight elevator is working today and has not been altered. There are a total of four staircases.

Sears left this building in 1969 and moved to Oglethorpe Mall, a large indoor mall, further south in Savannah. The State acquired the building in 1973 for the Georgia Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS). Major interior construction and retrofitting occurred under their ownership. They covered the terrazzo with commercial carpet and ceramic tiles. The terrazzo is in excellent shape as it is now being exposed by the current owner. The grand and south staircase's original terrazzo was not covered. The building had the electricity and plumbing reworked. New electrical panels were installed, as well as thermo panes on the upper floors and shatterproof windows on the ground level. The upper floor windows were made by DFCS and were not part of the original design. The ceiling was brought down in height down to accommodate their renovations. The basement and the first level have 9' ceilings and the second level has a 10' ceiling. There was a sprinkler system installed on all floors. Acoustical lay in tiles were used throughout, as well as drywall and metal stud interior walls. The once open floor plan of the first and second floor is now riddled with a maze of offices and rooms. All of these internal walls put in during the DFCS renovation can be easily removed. They are not load bearing walls. There is central HVAC on all levels. DFCS left the building in 2004 to a new location on Wheaton Street.

Historic Sears Building

County and State

The State of Georgia's surplus property division opened up bidding to sell the property. A local dentist, Bill Trout acquired the building in 2006. He began plans to adapt the building into residential condos on the second and third floors and commercial space on the ground floor. Residential rooms with bathrooms are now on the second floor, although the project was since abandoned due to zoning ordinances limiting the building's use. Little interior alterations have been done since DFCS left in 2004.

The current owner, Michael Sharkey, is not currently using the building. He maintains the property and has begun to remove the carpet and ceramic tile left by DFCS revealing the terrazzo underneath in the basement. He has put the building on the market to sell. The building is in excellent condition structurally.

8. Statement of Significance

Applicable National Register Criteria

(Mark "x" in one or more boxes for the criteria qualifying the property for National Register listing.)

G less than 50 years old or achieving significance within the past 50 years.

A Property is associated with events that have made a significant contribution to the broad patterns of our history.

B Property is associated with the lives of persons significant in our past.

C Property embodies the distinctive characteristics of a type, period, or method of construction or represents the work of a master, or possesses high artistic values, or represents a significant and distinguishable entity whose components lack individual distinction.

D Property has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important in prehistory or history.

Criteria Considerations

(Mark "x" in all the boxes that apply.)

Property is:

- A Owned by a religious institution or used for religious purposes.
- B removed from its original location.
- C a birthplace or grave.
- D a cemetery.
- E a reconstructed building, object, or structure.
- F a commemorative property.

Statement of Significance Summary Paragraph (Provide a summary paragraph that includes level of significance and applicable criteria.)

The Historic Sears Building is a testament to Post World War II development and commercial innovations. It is also an example of the grandeur of interior design department stores and exterior commercial design in early 20th century. In the mid 1940's Sears began to capitalize on suburban community developments nationally.

Narrative Statement of Significance (Provide at least one paragraph for each area of significance.)

The exterior commercial design is in excellent condition and retains the historical integrity of the period of significance. The brick masonry is well preserved. The interior has been altered heavily but it merely covers the original design superficially. The beautiful details of the original design such as the terrazzo flooring and polished wood balustrades are intact and show minimal damage. The original details, such as the ceiling and original walls, have not been altered or destroyed. The original design is intact underneath the alterations. The building was designed by Philip Schutze and his partner Warren Armistead. Philip Schutze was recognized as one of the foremost architects of the time. Schutze currently has his residential architecture on the National Register of Historic Places with Atlanta's Swan House. (National Park Service n.d.) He was educated at the Georgia Institute of Technology (1908-12) and at Columbia University (1912-13). He went on to win the prestigious Rome Prize from the American Academy in Rome. His designs reflected his classical training in his use of symmetry. This symmetry is present in his design for the Historic Sears building in Savannah. (New Georgia Encyclopedia n.d.)

The Sears Building's contribution to commerce is well documented in local news copy. The announcement was made on June 22, 1945 that Sears planned to build a large retail store in Savannah. There was already a Sears in Savannah in the central downtown on Broughton Street. By September 1945 they were ready to build but needed an approval by the War Production Board. This Sears was the first commercial building built in Savannah after WWII. The new store in Savannah was highly publicized and was a pivotal moment in post WWII Savannah. Virgil D. Johnson, the store manager said, "Our faith in steady development and progress of this section is the reason for erecting this type of store". (Sears, Roebuck Ready To Build 1945) The Savannah Morning News heralded this new store as the mark of a new era in the city. "The event will be an outstanding one in the mercantile history of Savannah which has felt the need of such a center for many years and enthusiastically anticipates the service which will be rendered to growing Savannah". (Hunter, Opening of Sears Nov. 14 to Mark New Era for City 1946) A huge national chain locating a new store in Savannah helped insure the growth of Savannah outwards. The progressive design is also evident in the large parking lot adjacent to the store that anticipated automobile use growth.

The construction of this building in the suburbs of 1940's Savannah is a monument to the post WWII community planning and development. The downtown center was no longer central for many people who were living in the new suburbs. The Sears building marks the movement of urban design and planning going from the urban to suburban model.

The Sears also contributed to Savannah's social history. Thousands of local citizens attended the official opening on November 14, 1946. There was a ceremony officiated by Savannah's Mayor Nugent, and J.F. Moore, the vice president of Sears Roebuck. It created over 200 jobs for local residence who worked in the store as well as those involved in the construction. Local citizens helped greatly in the construction. The contract was awarded to the local Artley Company. Other Savannah artisans, engineers, and specialists participated in the work as well. (Enormous Crowds attend Opening of Sears, Roebuck 1946)

Man Injured In Fall Through Glass Door

Ouy Maness, 269 West Thirty-fifth street, was slightly injured last night when he fell through a glass door pane while fighting with his wife, according to police reports. He was taken to the St. Joseph's Hospital in a Stupid Brothers ambulance. Police reported that Mr. Maness suffered a cut on the left shoulder.
Officer R. Strickland of city police investigated. City police placed both the man and his wife on the docket for today on a charge of fighting.

MRS. HODGE OFFERS ANNUAL $250 PRIZE

For Improvements In Rural Racial Understanding

An annual award of $250 has been offered by Mrs. Henry Hodge for the most outstanding work in improving rural racial understanding. The award begins in 1946 and will probably be presented in the spring of that year.
Prof. Benjamin Hubert of Georgia
State Industrial College said yesterday.

to children of working mothers as Lanham Act provisions, under which they have been operating, required.

Mrs. Varnedoe last night said that she was "more than gratified that there has been enough interest and real support in the community to effect the continuance of the nursery centers," and that she hopes "they will be successful."

More than 1,300 enlisted personnel of the Georgia State Guard arrived

GRAYSON MEMORIAL PLANNED BY USWV

Resolution Passed at State Convention

A memorial to William M. Grayson will be arranged here by the state organization of the United Spanish War Veterans.

Stephen N. Harris, chairman of the committee on resolutions and enactments, announced last night that the resolution was unanimously passed this week at the state convention in Augusta.

The cost will be carried by the state organization. The memorial seeks to give expression to the appreciation the Spanish War veterans feel for Mr. Grayson, who was state commander and national commander-in-chief of their organization.

Mr. Harris said last night it is expected that the memorial will take the form of a bronze plaque to be placed on the state memorial of the Spanish War Veteran in Forsyth Park.

Incoming President W. T. Stradley of Atlanta will name a committee which will have power to act in choosing a suitable memorial.

Mr. Grayson, familiarly known as "General," died in Savannah March 31, 1941 and to him, both as "an individual and as state and national commander," this tribute will be paid.

For a Refresher Course

Additional members of the Seventeenth Battalion, Georgia State Guard, who are interested in attending the final week of the two-week course in tactical training being held at Fort Benning all this week and next are asked to contact their commanding officers or guard headquarters. It was announced last night by Capt. Morris Rabban, public relations officer of the battalion.

Arrangements for equipment and transportation for additional trainees to leave this week and

W. L. Kilroy, commander-elect of Chatham Post No. 16 American Legion, officiated at last night's meeting in the absence of H. H. Miller, post commander, who was out of the city.

General plans for the installation of Mr. Kilroy and the staff of newly elected officers, were discussed during the session. Guy C. Stone of Glenwood, prominent Georgia leader of the American Legion, is scheduled to be the installing officer at the ceremonies to be held at the July meeting.

A letter of acknowledgment from the White House, signed by President Truman's secretary was read to the membership by John D. Stapleton, assistant adjutant. The letter acknowledged a resolution passed by the membership and sent to Washington on April 30, in which Post
No. 16 as a body pledged support and loyalty to the new president, who is also a veteran and legionnaire.

William S. Nelson, a former staff sergeant in the AAF and full member in General Eisenhower's personal plane, was introduced as a new member during the meeting. Discharged on June 1 with a total of 137 points, Mr. Nelson is a veteran of over sixty missions in Africa, Italy and the European theater.

The plane on which Sergeant Nelson was a crew member also carried General Marshall and Secretary of War Stimson on inspection tours after the African campaign. Mr. Nelson is now employed by the United States Engineering Department and lives with his wife and daughter, Marlene, at 645 East Thirty-seventh street.

Bank Auditors Hold Business Conference

Members of the Bank Auditors and Comptrollers Association met yesterday in the directors' room of the Liberty National Bank and Trust Com-

Church In Jesup

E. Irwin Hulbert, Jr., of Savannah, who will graduate from the theological school of the University of the South at Sevens, Tenn., on Tuesday, will be ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal Church at Christ Church, Savannah, and will serve in this diocese. It was announced yesterday at the office of the Rt. Rev. Middleton S. Barnwell, D. D., bishop of the Diocese of Georgia.

Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Hulbert, parents of the Savannahian, and his sister, Miss Virginia Hulbert, will go to Sevens next week for the graduation.

Mr. Hulbert decided to enter the ministry after he had already begun a business career. He worked for about two years here with the Mexican Petroleum Corporation, after attending Georgia Tech. He attended Georgia Teachers College at States-boro for a year after deciding to study for the ministry. He then enrolled

Restrictions On Small Crafts Now Removed

The last of the war-time restrictions on the use of pleasure craft in the Sixth Naval District has been lifted with the announcement by Capt. M. J. Ryan, district coast guard officer of the Sixth Naval District, of the relaxing of all restrictions on small boats in the Atlantic, Caribbean and Gulf coast regions.

The announcement states that the only area now restricted to craft in this district is the Cooper river around the Navy Yard and the Army Port of Embarkation.

The new order permits craft to operate at night as well as in daytime and eliminates all special identification markings.

Huge New Center Awaits
WPB Green Light

ARTLEY GETS CONTRACT

Clearing of Two-Block Area
Starts Soon

Awaiting only the green light from the War Production Board to start actual construction, Sears, Roebuck & Co. yesterday released details of plans for its modern shopping center at Bull and Henry streets.

Embracing a four-story complete department store with 100,000 square feet of floor space, a landscaped parking area capable of handling 325 cars as well as a super service station, the center will occupy two entire blocks, bounded by Duffy, Anderson, Bull and Drayton streets. It will employ 350 persons. Sears estimates the new center will be within a one-mile radius of $5,000.

The Artley Co. of Savannah has been awarded the contract for the construction work. Schuler & Armstrong, Atlanta, are the architects.

Vigil D. Johnson, local manager for Sears, announced that work of raising dwellings on the site will start within a few days. The dwellings between Duffy and Duffy lane, site of the proposed big department store building, will be razed first. This will be expedited to enable excavation work to start. The No. 3 Fire Station building is not to be razed for several months. It is understood Sears lease on its present Broughton street store does not expire until September 1, 1946, and it is the plan to have the new store and center finished and ready for occupancy on or before that date.

The main department store building, 300 by 105 feet, will be a four-story reinforced concrete and steel structure with colored brick facing. It will face south extending from Duffy street and opening on a parking court along the north side of Henry street. A trucking court for handling incoming and outgoing merchandise will be built into the ground floor of the building at Duffy and Drayton streets.

Air conditioned throughout, the new department store building will have the following departments: Basement, hardware, paint, household appliances, plumbing, sporting goods and luggage; first floor, ladies' and men's clothing; second floor, furniture, rugs and electrical appliances; top floor, offices and air conditioning equipment. The top floor will be only one-half the length of the lower floors.

An interesting feature of the main floor will be eleven murals depicting the history of Savannah. Eugene Montgomery, Evanston, Ill., has been commissioned to do this work. Mr. Montgomery has been engaged on this task for the past seven months, three of which was in historical research and photographing local scenes.

The southern portion of the two-block area will include the big service station and paved, landscaped parking area.

The service station will be 68 by 114 feet. Around the service station can be parked 192 cars and inside will be accommodations to handle the sale of gas and oil to six cars and battery and accessory service to eight other vehicles simultaneously.

There will be six entrances to the parking area on the south side of Henry street and four entrances to the area on the north side directly in front of the store.

The parking areas will be landscaped and ornamented with azaleas.

Parents Expect Him to

Arthur Dugger, AOM 1/c, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Dugger of Savannah, landed in California yesterday morning along with 21 other ex-convicts, thin and emaciated, the first liberated from prison camps in Japan. He is reported to be the first man from Savannah to reach United States soil after being released from Japanese captivity.

A fellow victim of Arthur's at one of the Jap prison camps was the 28-plane marine aviator, Maj. Gregory (Pappy) Hoyt, who is due to arrive in California this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Dugger received the telegram from California yesterday, saying that their hero son had landed. They expect he will be home in four or five days.

The 26-year-old sailor was reported missing on August 11, after having been in the navy nearly three years. He was overseas for two years, during which his job was turret gunner on a patrol bomber.

Arthur will arrive here too late for a reunion with one of his three brothers who have also been hitting the enemy hard and heavy during the war years. Cpl. James L. Dugger left Savannah Wednesday night for shipment to the Pacific. He had been home on 30-day furlough after two years overseas as a member of the First Armored Division.

ROSSITER RETURNS TO MORNING NEWS

Navy Combat Veteran Is Released On Points

Frank Rossiter, member of the editorial staff of the Morning News, who covered his typewriter and was off to the wars on December 7, 1941, was out of the navy and back at his old desk yesterday.

Mr. Rossiter entered the navy as an ensign and advanced to lieutenant's senior grade before his discharge on points at the Charleston Navy Yard Thursday. He commanded an LST in the invasion of Normandy and shuttled approximately a division of men and equipment across the channel without loss.

Widely known for his fair and accurate handling of a news story,

$250,000 PROJECT AT LIBERTY BANK

Office Building to Undergo Extensive Renovation

NEW HEATING SYSTEM

Oil Replacing Coal Will Reduce Downtown Smoke

Improvements costing in excess of $250,000 will be made to the Liberty Bank building, it was announced yesterday by Charles S. Sanford, president of the Liberty National Bank and Trust Company.

The improvements, which will include renovation of the building and banking quarters and changing of the entire heating system, were started yesterday as the two old coal boilers and radiators throughout the building were scrapped and hauled away.

With Old Man Winter nearing town, the bank official said the heating improvements will be given preference and pushed through to completion. All radiators are to be replaced with a more modern type. A modern oil-burning boiler will also be installed. An interesting feature of this improvement is that it will clear the downtown area of much of the soft coal smoke heretofore experienced.

Mr. Sanford said that during the past several years the bank was determined to "put every ounce of energy into winning the war," and let many needed improvements in the physical appearance of the building slide until victory was won. Now that the war is over the bank has launched the program of improvements scheduled to extend over a period of twelve months.

The banking quarters are to be completely renovated and air-conditioned. A system of indirect lighting and low-type banking fixtures will give the Liberty National Bank as modern a banking floor as can be had, Mr. Sanford said.

Erected in 1904 by the Old National Bank, the ten-story structure was last renovated in 1915 when the banking floor was lowered one floor to its present location.

"Open House" Closes Hunter Field Canteen

ARC Volunteer Group Served 150,000 During Long Operation

Volunteer workers of the Canteen Corps of the Savannah Chapter of the American Red Cross held open house yesterday afternoon to close the canteen service at Hunter Field which has served more than 150,000 military personnel since it began in June, 1944.

The canteen was opened on D-day at the suggestion of Brig. Gen. James M. Fitzmaurice, then commanding general of Hunter Field, to serve transient flyers stopping at the field. Originally financed by the Savannah chapter of the Red Cross, the importance of the canteen was soon recognized by area headquarters in Atlanta and for some time has been financed from area funds.

Commander Present

Lt. Col. Earl A. Field, commanding officer of Hunter Field, and Eugene T. Thompson, field director of the American Red Cross at Hunter Field, attended the open house.

Mr. Thompson said that the service to military personnel by the canteen could not be over-estimated. "The quality of the services rendered by the volunteer workers," he said, "has won high praise all over the

LEGAL TANGLES PUZZLE LEADERS

Prospect of Arnall Going Creates a Dilemma

COOK STUDIES THE LAW

Whether a Special Election Would Be Necessary

ATLANTA, Sept. 7 (AP)—Attorney General J. Eugene Cook and his entire staff are studying the legal question of whether a special election for governor will have to be called if Gov. Ellis Arnall resigns to accept appointment as solicitor general of the United States.

Asked if he had received a request for an opinion on procedure to be followed in filling the unexpired sixteen months of Arnall's term if the governor goes to Washington, Cook said:

"This office has received no request for an opinion on the subject. But, anticipating that the question may be raised, we are busy studying all angles of the question now."

Meanwhile, as behind-the-scenes developments came thick and fast in the most widely discussed Georgia political situation in years, politicians from throughout the state converged on Atlanta to watch and wait.

Many who were closely identified with the administrations of former Governors Eugene Talmadge, ardent political foe of Arnall, and E. D. Rivers were holding conferences at downtown hotels. They sought to keep in touch with developments at the Capitol by telephone.

When asked the direct question for publication if he has been proffered the solicitor generalship, Arnall says that he has not. But administration and anti-administration leaders are proceeding on the theory that he has been approached.

Senate President Frank Cross, who apparently would take over the gubernatorial duties if Arnall vacated, said yesterday at Peoria, Ill., that Arnall had been offered the position. Earlier Georgia's Senators George Earle and Russell said the White House had confirmed that the Governor was in line for a high federal position, if he wanted it.

Provisions of the new state Constitution, adopted only a month ago, raise knotty questions for Attorney General Cook and his staff to unravel on procedure for filling the unexpired term.

Some advisors of the Governor contended that the new Constitution empowers him to appoint a successor. Their theory was that the new basic law created the office of lieutenant governor and provided for his succession to the governorship in the event of a vacancy.

With the first election for lieutenant governor to be held in November, 1946, these administration advisers took the view that there now is a vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor which Arnall could fill by appointment. Then, if Arnall resigned, the appointed lieutenant governor would take over the higher office.

"Our faith in the steady development and progress of this section is the reason for our erecting this type of store," Mr. Johnson said in revealing plans for the center. Sears first established in Savannah in 1928. Since coming to the local store Mr. Johnson has been very active in all worth-while civic enterprises and has been a No. 1 booster of Savannah.

R. L. Cooper, realtor, acted as real estate agent for Sears, Roebuck & Co. in the purchase of the site for the development. The site includes two entire blocks excepting one small parcel. Legal matters were handled by the law firm of Abrahams, Spuhan & Lawrence.

FAMOUS NAVAL LEADER

Outstanding In the Victories In the Pacific

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 7 (AP)—Funeral services for Vice Adm. John Sidney McCain will be held at Arlington National Cemetery Monday. It was announced today as Admiral Halsey credited the stout-hearted officer with a great share of the victory over Japan.

The body of the veteran naval officer, whose death Thursday night was attributed to battle exhaustion, will be flown to Washington, D. C., in a navy plane, accompanied by a guard of honor.

Times of the plane's departure and the funeral services were to be announced later.

One of McCain's sons, Gordon McCain, attorney for the Federal Communications Commission in Pasadena, Cal., arrived here today. The other son, John, Jr., was in the Pacific and it was not known whether he would be able to attend.

ALLIED ARMIES PRAISED

Marshal Zhukov Pleads For Enduring Peace

BY DANIEL DE LUCE

BERLIN, Sept. 7 (AP)—The military might of four great Allies thundered through Berlin's battered streets today in a jubilant V-J parade marked by Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov's sobering plea for "organization of a just, enduring and complete peace."

More than 50 low-slung 65-ton Soviet tanks, of a type virtually no spectator of the three other Allies knew existed, roared three abreast past the reviewing stand where Zhukov, Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., commander of the United States Third Army, British and French officers stood at attention.

"Thousands of Allied military spectators along Charlotenburger Chaussee listened as Zhukov, the conqueror of Berlin, heralded "victory over the black forces of aggression in the Far East."

Zhukov said the defeat of Japan was assured through the "friendly assistance" of United States, British, Soviet, French and Chinese fighting forces.

"We salute all those who never lost faith in the justice of our cause. We salute with our battle flags those who have given victory. It now remains for us to conclude this victory by organization of a just, enduring peace."

From now on the peoples of the world aggression in the west and Japanese landlady in the east."

Then—as Zhukov shouted "Glory to the armed forces of the United States of America, the Soviet Union, the United Kingdom and the French republic. Long live our great victory—A Russian regimental band struck up a march melody.

From the east behind nine Red flags, silhouetted against the Franco-Russian war victory column, came the first troops—a Soviet guards battalion which had captured the Reichstag and Hitler's chancellery.

Americans held positions at the rear of the infantry march. It came from the 84th Parachute Infantry Regiment, which spearheaded the Sicilian invasion, defended Anzio and invaded Normandy; the 50th Parachute Infantry Regiment, and the 325th Glider Infantry Regiment.

Between the Russians and Americans strode France's Chasseurs and Zouaves and Britain's Queens, Devon and Durhams.

Between salutes the "two Georges"—Zhukov and Patton—had long stretches of jovial conversation.

The strains produced a stirring finale. Veteran units of Britain's Fifth Royal Horse Artillery, Eleventh Hussars and First Royal Tank Regiment led off.

President Vargas Praises United States

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 7 (UP)—President Getulio Vargas in an Independence Day speech hailed Brazilian-United States co-operation, described Brazil's international position as unprecedented in its prestige and security and reiterated that he will not be a candidate in the December presidential election.

Addressing a huge throng at Vasco da Gama stadium, Vargas stressed the promptness with which the United States "as soon as the struggle ended, returned to us without asking for any compensation, the air and naval bases that cost them millions, thus corresponding nobly to our confidence and allaying the fears of some patriots who forecast difficulties in the restitution of those parcels of our national territory."

away. The civilians immediately shot two of the prisoners in the back and brought down the third as he tried to run.

A German police report listed the names of the two men shot at the townhall as Bernhard E. Radowski and M. M. Miles. The other three were listed as Leonhard A. Kornblau, Charles Wolf and Frans Misak.

European theater casualty files list a bomber crew missing in action on July 31, 1944, including Second Lt. Bernard E. Radowski, co-pilot, ASN 0-815740; Sgt. Meredith M. Mills, Jr., ball turret gunner, ASN 14004813; Lt. Leonard A. Kornblau, pilot, ASN 0-818771; Second Lt. Charles E. Wolf, navigator, ASN 0-710330; and Sgt. Frank L. Misak, tail gunner, ASN 34350990.

Captain Vellebach said seven of the defendants in the two cases have been turned over to the United States Army. Among them is a Stauffenberg assassin and Nazi party member whose confession provided a unique demonstration of Nazi ideology.

The confession quoted the defendant as saying:

"The parachutist (who landed near Weisenbach) was wounded and in a very weak condition. All medical help was refused him and then we took the American soldier in this condition to the townhall courtyard and there directed such heavy blows upon his head with a monkey wrench that he fell senseless."

"I myself beat the soldier with the above named tool until he almost fell dead."

"The wounded flier was then shot dead by another Nazi."

"I carried out and performed this deed (chubbing the airman) in full awareness, as befits a good National Socialist. I was willing to perform this slaying because I am well known as a good, obedient National Socialist."

The death of another of the three American fliers at Weisenbach was described by a different defendant. As a result of a spy from one flier the German said he found the aviator with visible head and foot wounds. The villagers started to take him into town to turn him over to police.

BACKING IN HO FOR TAX S

AS MUCH AS 20 PER

No Senate or House Until Monday

BY DOUGLAS B. COLE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (AP)—Congress talked today about an 18 per cent cut in our 1946 tax.

Senator George, Democrats, plugged for it. He's one of the Senate finance men which handles all tax bills.

And there's backing in it for a tax slash like that, Democratic House, Republicans, wants a 20 per cent cut.

President Truman has mended a "limited" cut. A 10 per cent cut would lower by about 600,000,000 the total income taken from individuals.

George wants to slice about 600,000,000 from taxes paid in 1946. He didn't put that on campaign bills.

Taxes were the big noise. But a couple of tax payments to the unemployed employment—gave sperms.

Congress had no regular session, arguing in conference rooms, talking in offices, to get bills ready for action.

There won't be any Senate session until Monday (the House is going to vote for investigation of Pearl Harbor—approved by the Senate).

Members filled in the gap plenty of talk about politics, Harbor, taxes, atomic bombs, employment and jobless pay.

On pay for the unemployed. The President has recently added federal money to state to pay up to $25 a week for jobless workers.

But it looked like a fatal when George—the finance man—is considering that, too—said plan was "just not workable" and it would conflict with the nearly half the states.

He said these states would deduct from their payments ever amount the federal government puts up for the unemployed.

Senator Kilgore, Den West Virginia, and legal talent Social Security Board said want to. Kilgore contended state hands out the money. I pay out federal funds along state funds and not deduct thing.

The trucks went unutilized. The House ways and means committee, considering the same bill, heard labor spokesmen for it. Nothing was settled either.

On full employment. The President has asked a bill for a Senate's backing subsidies. If it became law, the government would survey each year employment prospects for the next. If it thought there would be unemployment, it would recon. that business do something about it. If that didn't work, it would returned to Congress a public program, said by the

It also emphasized in grand increasing number of murders in the city.

VOTING PLACES CHOSEN

Instructions Authorize Use of Stickers On Ballot

Election of officers appointed for the general election Tuesday will meet at 8 o'clock Monday night at the home of American Legion Post No. 184, Bull Street and Park Avenue, for instructions and to take the oath of office. Maj. John B. Fawcett, election supervisor, said yesterday.

List of election officers has not been completed but it is expected their names will be announced today or tomorrow.

Major Fawcett's instructions to election officers will authorize use of stickers instead of requiring the voter to write in the candidate of his choice. Although the instructions do not mention specific candidates the clause is directed at the solicitor general's race. Both Mr. Ryan and Judge Alexander have distributed stickers to supporters to eliminate the necessity of writing in the name. Neither appears on the ballot.

A voter may vote the straight Democratic ticket simply by marking an X in the place provided at the top of the ballot. Major Fawcett said voters using this simplified procedure, however, will only casting a ballot in the only contested race—that for solicitor general.

Major Fawcett said that with few exceptions rules governing primary elections apply in the general election. Disputes as to eligibility of a voter will be referred to the judges of the election who will be in the tax collector's office at the Court House. The judges have not yet been named.

The voting places Tuesday will be located as follows:

Opening of Sears Nov. 14 to Mark New Era for City

BY ANNA C. HUNTER

The large, modern department store being erected in the extensive area between Bull and Drayton and Duffy and Anderson streets, progress of which has been eagerly followed by Savannahians, will be opened by Sears, Roebuck and Company on November 14, according to announcement by Virgil D. Johnson, local manager of the company. The event will be an outstanding one in the mercantile history of Savannah which has felt the need of such a center for many years and enthusiastically anticipates the service which will be rendered to growing Savannah.

One of the striking features of the opening of this store is the fact it is located in the center of town, departing from the old precedent of locating business houses in the downtown area. Modern efficiency and newness lay great emphasis on the adaptability of following the practice of providing such an establishment in such an area as will draw from large percentages of the population, officials of the company point out. A further feature is the provided parking space, the company having devoted the southern portion of the two-block area to a giant service station and parking area equipped to handle 322 automobiles at one time.

Savannahians are further interested in the location of the big, nationally-known firm here, since the decision to do business here on such a wide scale denotes the confidence placed in the future development of Savannah and its surrounding area.

The new building, of simplified modern design, is constructed of reinforced concrete with colored brick facing. It consists of a basement and three stories, dimensions of the main building being 300 by 105 feet. On the walls of the main floor will be the murals depicting the history of Savannah done by Eugene Montgomery of Evanston, Ill., nationally-known artist.

Everything has gone into the planning of the building which will offer the greatest convenience to customers. Its representatives state, Sears having availed itself of the twenty-five years of experience in the retail field to provide merchandise and service. The new building marks a great forward step in the history of the well-known mercantile business, and Mr. Johnson's enthusiasm is shared by the officials of the home office who have co-operated in erecting one of their handiwork buildings in Savannah.

Artley Company, Savannah contractor, have been in charge of construction and Schultz and Armistead of Atlanta are architects. Despite the tremendous handicaps in securing material, the store has progressed steadily and is now on the eve of opening its doors to the public of Savannah and neighboring cities. Access to the new building is eagerly awaited, the interior to be finished in the latest modern manner and facilities proven most advantageous to shoppers realized. The exterior will be properly landscaped with special attention devoted to the mammoth parking area, to which there are six entrances to the south side and

YOUTHS IGNORE POLICE WARNING

Halloween Vandalism Reaches High Proportion

THREE FALSE ALARMS

Children Have Gay Time On Broughton Street

Carnival reigned with packed crowds, animated spirits, and weird and colorful costumes on Savannah's Broughton street last night with one of the biggest Halloween celebrations.

But there was anything but safety for Savannah's blue-robed policemen and firemen, as noisy elements of the celebrants disregarded police pleas for voluntary observance of property rights. Both city and county police were swamped with complaints concerning willful destruction and mutilation as well as other petty nuisances, while the firemen were called to three false alarms within a half-hour period.

Broughton Street Crowded

Broughton street was the focal point of the high-spirited and gaily-attired revelers as they jammed both sides of the thoroughfare. They began congregating there shortly after dusk, and reached the greatest density about 8 o'clock.

Boys were dressed as girls, and girls as boys; many wore false faces, and some contorted themselves with smearing soot moustaches and sideburns on their faces, or blacking their entire faces. Tots who seemed unable to comprehend the occasion were being goaded on by their elders.

Most of the fun was confined to good-natured frolics, but hot all of it.

Calls Delege Police

County police reported they were receiving more calls—resulting from activities such as throwing sandbags on front porches and damaging property—than they could answer. And city police at times found themselves a little behind in answering calls.

Among the incidents they reported was a screen door being ripped off, firecrackers being exploded in milk bottles and smashing the latter to bits, breaking windows, and marking on suits and shop windows with soap.

City firemen reported two false alarms at the administration building at Moses Rogers Home, one at 38 Schools Are 100% Enrolled In Junior R. C.

Thirty-eight schools of the county have reported 100 per cent enrollment in the Junior Red Cross. It was announced at yesterday's meeting of the executive board yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

Schools recently reporting full membership were two white schools, Thirty-eighth Street School, with Mrs. Lois Hines as sponsor, Savannah High School, with Miss Vera Dodd, serving as sponsor, and eight colored schools.

Colored schools with their sponsors included West Broad Street, Rosalie Bryan; Harris Street, Eunice Bryan; West Savannah, Alma Shepherd; Burroughs, Ester Bryan; Springfield Terrace, Henrietta Gaston; Woodville, Mamie Parley; Maple Street, Carrie Hendrickson; and Abiloo, Frances Thorpe.

All schools in the county will have reported 100 per cent enrollment prior to the November 15 deadline, officials hope.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Wallace Hornstein, director.

City Campaign Fight Now In Doldrums

Political talk which has been steadily diminishing the past few days is expected to pick up again after Tuesday's general election.

Both OI-People Party and the Citizens Progressive League have just about completed work on their slate for the December 10 city primary. No new names have been heard as possible candidates for aldermen.

The general election for the city will take place Tuesday, January 14, with the successful candidates for mayor, aldermen and Police Court recorder taking over their duties January 27.

He is one of Savannah's finest business men and has taken an active part in community life here. Gen. R. E. Wood, chairman of the board of directors, is well known in Savannah and is keenly interested in the development of his business in this section.

Every possible effort will be made to facilitate the showing of the new store to Savannahians and nearby visitors on the occasion of the formal opening on November 14.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, (UP)—Police are looking for robust thieves who walked off with 225 pounds of honey from the home of Alora Haddock.

Muller is only now receiving this high recognition for a discovery he made in the late 1920s—the production of mutations by X-rays.

Fellow professors said that, in laymen's terms, Muller's research dealt with material determining the hereditary characteristics of organisms in general.

Directs Radiation

By directing X-ray radiations at reproductive germ cells, Muller was able to change the nature of hereditary material so that the characteristics of the next generation and generations thereafter would be altered.

He was one of a group of scientists who worked with Professor Morgan from 1910 to 1915 at Columbia University to develop the modern theories of heredity. They were able to explain the whole mechanics of heredity for the first time and established the chromosomes and genes theories of heredity.

Attendance Is Good As Unions' School Opens Class Work

Classes in a six-weeks course, open to all members of organized labor in Savannah, were inaugurated at the Labor Temple last night.

Despite the fact that the classes were held on Halloween night, attendance was good. The classes will be conducted each Thursday night for the next six weeks, with the exception of Thanksgiving night, it was announced.

Instructors in the two classes—"How to Function in a Union Meeting" and "Your Benefits Under the Social Security Act"—are Lowry Axtley and Brainard Hodge of the Savannah school system.

Sponsored by the education committee of Trades and Labor Assembly of Savannah and conducted by the Georgia Workers Education Service, the first meetings of the two classes was "most gratifying," assembly officials stated.

Officials pointed out that enrollments in these classes is still open for any member of organized labor who wishes to attend. Application should be made by calling 3-1004. Tuition is free. They also stated that any subject that might be desired by members would be taught in these weekly classes.

The classes are designed to better equip the worker so that he might arrive his community better in every phase of life, they said.

Habersham Plans Will Be Modified to Meet Objection

The Park and Tree Commission last night agreed to modify its proposals for the opening of the Habersham street squares with the view to compromising the objections of property owners on the squares who complained that the plans would prevent access by vehicles to their dwellings.

The commission will devise a modified plan, which will be submitted later to the special committee of City Council appointed by Mayor Nugent to study the proposals.

The special committee, headed by Alderman Henry Mullis, met with the commission and the Chamber of Commerce committee at the City Hall.

While the modified plan is expected to include an access street to buildings around the squares, on the east and west sides it was emphasized by all concerned that the new plan will not cause Habersham to be "another Montgomery street."

Junior Deacons Elect at Bull St. Baptist

New officers of the junior board of deacons of Bull Street Baptist Church last night were elected at a banquet for board members and wives which was held at the church. Approximately 100 attended.

The following officers were elected: R. L. Brown, general chairman; Clyde Manuel, vice chairman; R. M. Shearouse, secretary; L. E. Smith, chairman of the morning board; and J. M. Owens of the night board.

brick construction. The property has a loading capacity of four cars on a Central of Georgia spur track.

It was explained by Mr. Brown that the company made the move so as to be in a position to operate economically and sell at a close margin of profit and thus keep the independent merchants competitive, with prices that will prevail in the larger super stores. The wholesale department will be strictly in a wholesale business to merchants, he stated.

type, inaugurated for the first time by Sears in its Savannah store. It is the result of years of experience in carefully concentrated groups which afford easy accessibility in selection. Costume jewelry and accessories are shown for every woman from avell debutantes to the stately dowager, as is also a complete line of the latest models in corsetry. Sears has graduate corsetiers to serve the customers.

Complete Line of Toys

The basement is one of the most spacious of the display rooms and a glimpse into it immediately suggests Christmas shopping. There is a complete line of children's toys and from the simplest presents to the latest from St. Nicholas' workshop. Sporting goods of every kind are found here for golf, tennis, fishing and hunting. There are guns from B-B air rifles to 12-gauge shotguns, with shells complete. There are accessories for boats and everything which will please the yachtsman.

Wallpaper and paint has a section all its own, a very complete line, and in addition on this floor are all the items of hardware which has been one of the commodities which has long made Sears famous. The hardware is displayed in the modern manner, with display equipment on the walls. Plumbing is displayed as it would appear in the home with a background of tile walls and the electrical equipment includes small table lamps and huge chandeliers, with all the technical devices necessary for use in the home. Building material such as roofing and interior cabinets are also offered on this floor and myriads of small items for those wishing to install the latest such equipment in their homes.

Handsome Furnishere

The second floor is the answer of dreams of housekeepers, with its beautifully displayed draperies, its handsome furniture and beautiful accessories. Here are to be found curtains, draperies, suites of furniture, elaborate lighting fixtures and all manner of modern fittings for the home. The goods are displayed in a way which makes it most convenient for the housekeeper shopping, the yardage being hung so that the purchaser may view it as it will appear when in the home. Radios and radio phones are found here and all sorts of equipment such as linoleum and kitchen cabinets, mattresses and springs and whole suites of furniture. Whole kitchen cabinets ready to hang on the wall are found here and also wall cabinets which may be used in kitchen or throughout the home. Rugs of every variety are also on display and materials for slip covers, among other items which have been difficult to obtain in recent months.

Has Hard-to-get Items

Because the Sears store was opening in a new territory a number of items which have not been available have been assigned to the store which are not available in other Sears stores.

SEARS ROEBUCK'S NEW STORE READY FOR OPENING—The new retail mercantile business center at 1202 Bull Street, which will open on Thursday. The picture above is the architect's perspective of the big new retail store in the center of Savannah

It is anticipated that the Savannah public will find the merchandise extremely attractive. In almost every instance Sears has an offering of unusual value. In a few instances they have not been able to install a very large variety of certain items such as electrical refrigerators and other items but on the whole the offering is unusually varied and attractive.

The building occupies two blocks with commodious parking spaces which will afford tremendous convenience for the customers. A service station is equipped with all facilities for motorists who frequent the store. The offices of the officers and staff are on the second floor, the office of Virgil D. Johnson, manager, being on this floor overlooking Duffy street and other offices in the rear. Elevators for merchandise lead from one floor to another.

One of the features of this store is its enormous stock room space, the store being so arranged that the merchandise flows from the stock room to the display room.

Duckweed is now the best plant from which to obtain rutin, used by medical men in treating a pathological condition known as "increased

Sears' New Store Is Built On City's Old "Lovers Lane"

Site at Bull and Duffy Has Been Developed by Enterprising Individuals to Embrace, Finally, Savannah's Most Modern Store Building.

BY ANNA C. HUNTER

In the days when Oglethorpe and his band of colonists first laid out Savannah in what was a promising, large area extending from the river to Liberty street, the section, now regarded as a very southern point for Sears, Roebuck and Company to erect a modern building, was a wilderness. Even in later years when the city began to extend southward the garden lots laid out for enterprising individuals to venture forth and cultivate, what is now Anderson street was romantically known as Lovers Lane. Now, where intrepid wooers once sought the wilds of the city outskirts for their amorous rendezvous, there stands a mammoth modern building where sights which would stagger the imagination of the early citizens are to be found.

The land whereon the two-block store stands, running from Bull to Drayton streets and from Anderson to Duffy, was originally under the early colonial land grants. The first deeds which the lawyers, Abrahams, Bouhan & Lawrence, have in their files in connection with the transfer of this property goes back to 1787, showing James, Charles and Philip Milledge as owners of the 564 acres originally in farm and garden lots of 45 acres each in Tyrconnel Tything, Derby Ward. Mary Milledge conveyed part of this land in 1853 to John W. Anderson, Francis S. Bartow and Charles A. L. Lamar as trustees, and these names appear repeatedly in records of that period in connection with the titles to land in Derby Ward, which about 1853 became known as Cuthbert Ward. Along about 1859 the name of Joseph Bryan appears and a large area of that section was known as Brownsville. Also the names of Frederick Kriete, Francis L. Gue, Louis Grenvald, William C. Burnham and others figure in the property, and that of George W. Garmany, who inherited the lot where now stands the old wooden house which was the Garmany home until fairly recent years, and where many Savannahians remember the typically and delightfully formal appearance of the interior, with everything shrouded in white linen against the summer heat.

Reference to this property in 1866 was in such terms as "that lot, piece or parcel of land situate, lying and being in the extended limits of the City of Savannah."

A map of Savannah by Edward A. Vincent, dated 1863, now in the city engineer's office of the City Hall, shows this section south of the Park Extension laid out in proposed garden lots. In these days transportation was practically an unknown quantity, and it was not until the following year that even the area within the city limits had a water works system to supplant the old wells. The map shows the city straggling southward to Gaston street with only a few houses in the Gaston street area, and the only one on East Gaston street evidently being the old Savannah residence now occupied by C. C. Curtis, president of the Savannah Electric & Power Company. The map shows Cuthbert Ward, south of the Park Extension, laid out in little lots bordering the White Bluff road.

road, took in all of Springfield plantation," and from "Anderson street to the Waters road and Wheaton street to Bilbo canal." In 1863 the limits were extended south of Anderson street to Twelfth street, now Forty-second street. Even as late as 1901 during the mayoralty of Herman Myers there was only one paved street south of Anderson, that being Bull street from Fortieth to Estill avenue, now Victory Drive. The mayor's report mentioned the necessity for "better accommodations for the increasing traffic." At that time the horse and buggy was in full swing and careening carriages and prancing steeds were indeed a problem; the first auto cars were terrifying the populace as they churned down dirt streets at the terrific speed of 20 miles an hour.

About this time, too, the property at Duffy street overlooked the tracks of the old E. & W. belt the noisy little electric models having replaced the city's old horse drawn vehicles. In about this time, too, the fire stations were equipped with the old horse drawn vehicles and some steamers, and fires were a deep concern to the city fathers. By 1880 the equipment was greatly improved and in that year the fire station which had previously been located on Henry street, west, was moved to 11 East Henry street, where it remained until razed for the erection of the new store.

Gradually the city moved southward until at the time Sears, Roebuck purchased the property there were property owners for every 60-foot lot where most of the area was occupied by residences, the majority of them the old-fashioned type of frame structure, rearing straight up from the sidewalk with small stoops, many having basements and several stories.

Now the property is occupied by a huge modern building of concrete with brick facing and extensive parking areas, and old Lovers Lane has given way to progress, and the erection of a huge mercantile business in what for many years has been largely a residential section.

collection of 890 volumes. John Cumming was named chairman and Augustus G. Oehler was the first librarian. Rules for the reading room included the following:

"Audible conversation is at all times prohibited. All persons visiting the room are prohibited from cutting, mutilating or taking away any paper or publication whatever."

The Georgia Historical Society, founded in 1839 and now housing one of the branches of the Savannah Public Library at Hodgson Hall, provided its members with a fine collection of books, historical documents and other items, but it was not until the twentieth century that Savannah had a real public library, whose service continues to the present day.

In July, 1900, an effort was made to start a "free library" here by Mrs. Bellina Cole Hall through means of a chain letter. Copies of this letter are now on file at Hodgson Hall, as are two of the contributions made in reply. One, a dime in a gilt frame, was donated in response to a request in one of the letters, and the other, a check, also in a gilt frame, was the contribution of B. A. Denmark to Mrs. Hall's library funds for Savannah.

The present library building, opened to the public in November, 1918, marks the greatest single advance made in library service here. The thirtieth anniversary celebration Wednesday night will provide the general public with an opportunity to see some of the progress made since that time. The program for the celebration will include special exhibits for both children and adults, the showing of a film in the reference room, and a demonstration of story-telling for children by means of records.

world, Bethesda, was founded by George Whitefield.

"The Land of Cotton" is graphically portrayed with Georgia's cotton fields being shown with a hand reaching from a globe above, as ships stand in the harbor awaiting the product, and busy textile mills weave the fabrics to be sent abroad.

Dr. Herty in Mural

"The Pines of Georgia" are shown in a panel depicting the forests and the port with turpentine being culled from the pines and barrels of spirits being rolled to the great vessels while modern mills turn out the pine pulp products and Dr. Charles H. Herty stands nearby.

"The Negro Negro" is shown in all phases of his activity.

"Much of Georgia's agricultural production depends upon the labor of the negro field hands," says the artist. "The state takes sincere pride in such men as Dr. George Washington Carver, internationally acclaimed scientist, and Hall Johnson, who with his great choir exemplifies the musical genius and deeply religious character of his race.

One panel is devoted to "sportsman's paradise," showing hunting for the abundance and variety of game and fishing, golf and the Savannah Golf Club dating back "at least to 1799," tennis, baseball and football.

Famous Georgians Depicted

"Georgia's Sons and Daughters" depicts the men and women of the state who have contributed conspicuously to many fields of endeavor, including every category from the Georgia peach to the Girl Scouts and Juliette Low, from Nobby Jones to Alexander Stephens and Henry W. Grady, from Sidney Lanier and Joel Chandler Harris to James Melton, from Ty Cobb to Dr. Crawford W. Long.

It is a varied, colorful, interesting and striking pageant, knit together with imagination and mingling the past and present with clever discernment.

The artist entered the Chicago Art Institute at the age of 20, studying there for three years and working in his spare time with an advertising agency. He painted "Carnation Babies," nationally known commercial art characters. He has painted portraits in the Chicago area for some years and is widely known for his portrait of Knute Rockne which now hangs in Rockne Memorial Hall at the University of Notre Dame.

Eugene Montgomery

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Eugene Montgomery, a painter and illustrator, was born in Texas in 1905 and died in Aurora, Illinois on December 16, 2001 of complications from a broken hip^[1].

Montgomery moved to Chicago in the 1920s to study at the Art Institute of Chicago. He began his career in advertising and his first commercial work, a sketch of his daughter, was bought by the Carnation Milk Co. and used on their magazine advertisements.

Montgomery continued to do commercial illustration for many years, and worked in many genres, but gained most of his recognition as a portrait painter and a muralist. Montgomery was a prolific portrait painter and often used his family as models. He was hired to paint numerous corporation chairpersons and executives, or those being recognized by companies, such as G.E. vacuum tube pioneer Saul Dushman.^[2] He was commissioned by Sears Roebuck to paint a series of portraits of its founders and officers, and many of his portraits still are displayed in the Sears Tower in Chicago. Montgomery painted similar portraits for companies such as Allstate and Motorola, and for heads of hospitals and universities. Montgomery's most famous and most widely-viewed portrait is probably that which he was commissioned to do of University of Notre Dame football coach Knute Rockne in the 1930s. The portrait remains in the University collection in South Bend, Indiana. Montgomery also painted anonymous portraits, such as Woman with Mandolin, which hangs prominently in the guest house of Oprah Winfrey^[3].

Besides portraits, Montgomery gained national recognition for his large murals. Sears hired him to paint murals for many of its stores around the country, typically showing scenes from local history. His first such mural was for a store in Houston in 1939. His last known mural, for Allstate Insurance in Chicago in the 1950s, depicted the history of the automobile age. The unveiling of Montgomery's 70' mural of Mecklenburg County at the grand opening of the new Sears store in Charlotte, North Carolina in 1949, one of a series of 12 commissioned by Sears, was a major event, and when the store was eventually torn down, the mural was relocated to South Mecklenburg High School in 1970. It was restored by Edwin Gil in 2005, and may still be seen today. After Gil's restoration the mural reportedly was appraised at one million dollars.

In 1942, Montgomery was featured in the Art Institute of Chicago's exhibition of prize-winning Chicago-area artists.^[4]

Montgomery painted until he was 85, working out of his home studio in Evanston, Illinois, and some of his work is also on display at the Covenant United Methodist Church in Evanston.
