I own a business across the street from another business owned by the proprietors of The Jinx. I also, along with my cousin and business partner, occupy the duplex directly next to the space in which the proposed new Jinx will be. We are the only residential units on the block and are both extremely excited about having them in our neighborhood. We're both musicians and avid art enthusiasts as are the majority of our friends that live in the Starland District. The reason I moved to this area of town is for that exact reason, the consolidation of the some of the best music venues, galleries, restaurants and unique retail in the greater Savannah area. I believe that with The Jinx, voted best bar in Savannah for 9 years running, we will continue the legacy of the Starland District being the premier arts and culture sector of Savannah. Please allow this wonderful establishment to bring more great art to our wonderful and quirky neighborhood.

Dear City of Savannah Official,

My name is Ava Pandiani, I am the general manager of Starland Yard, as well as a Savannah resident for the past nine years. When I first moved to Savannah, the person who trained me on my first shift ever told me a handful of cool places to go and the Jinx was at the top of his list to catch great live music. I went to numerous shows over the years and their commitment to excellent local shows as well as touring acts is something that is missed greatly in Savannah currently.

The Jinx is an institution, and was a physical place for Savannahians to rally around when Congress street was still primarily for locals. As this social hub has migrated south, it seems fitting that the Jinx should have a new home here as well.

I firmly support them in their endeavors and I believe they would be a strong and responsible addition to the Starland community.

Thank you,
Ava Pandiani

This email is in support of the proposed renovations to the property that will serve as the new home for the dearly missed bar and music venue known as The Jinx. As a resident, homeowner and business owner in the area I enthusiastically welcome the addition of the venue, bringing back a Savannah institution that acted as a cornerstone of the city's music scene. (And their staff was awesome too.)

Hello,

I live in Thomas Sq./Starland and am writing to support the re-opening of The Jinx in the Starland District. The original Jinx on Congress Street was the only venue in Savannah, for a long time, that provided worthwhile and diverse music and other performance acts on a regular basis. Now that Downtown is overrun with tourists, locals are very excited about the prospect of The Jinx opening their new location in an area that we already prefer to eat, drink, and socialize in. There has been a void in our music and arts culture since The Jinx closed their doors on Congress Street and I look forward to seeing the City of Savannah approve their new location.

Thank you,

As a longtime resident of The Starland district (since before anyone even called that), I can't tell you how excited I am, and what a blessing it would be, to welcome The Jinx to our neighborhood.

The Jinx is so much more than a venue or a bar. It's a family, it's a community. It is true, real Savannah, and with so much of our amazing city, its character and its people, being lost or displaced to out of state investors and developers, we urgently need spaces like The Jinx to keep our spirit alive. The things that make Savannah unique, and worth visiting, and more importantly worth living in and investing in, are spaces like this.

I look forward to seeing the doors open again, bringing the community together as they always did. Thank you for your consideration.

My name is Annalisa Cirincioni, I live at 101 W. 38th St. in Starland. I'm born and raised in Savannah 30 years now. I'm writing in support of The Jinx opening up in my neighborhood. I've always loved that bar and the platform it provided for music in this city when it was on Congress St. I was crushed to see it go 3 years ago and am beyond excited to see its return in Starland.

The Jinx reopening in Starland would greatly enrich the area and perfectly fit the neighborhood. I would be able to walk or ride my bike to The Jinx instead of driving, which is completely part of the charm of living in Savannah.

City of Savannah,

As a born and raised lifelong resident of Savannah, I can tell you that The Jinx is as unique to our city as our squares, The Cathedral, Pinkie Masters, and Bonaventure Cemetary.

The Jinx was the bar that brought people from all walks of life together and helped create the atmosphere of our city being all welcoming and all inclusive. Race, looks, money, dress, sexual orientation, or what you did for a living didn't matter, it only mattered that you were pleasant, respectful of others, and wanted to have a good time.

The same diversity of the crowd also applied to the entertainment The Jinx provided. On any random night you might find a classic rock band, hip hop, DJ battles, drag show, or improv. They provided an outlet for the artists in Savannah, and were appreciative of all forms of art, not just tied to those that made the most money.

The Jinx has been sorely missed, and I can only hope the City of Savannah will do everything it can to support their new location in Starland yard so a Savannah fixture can once again thrive!

Sincerely,

Ben Edwards, MD

Good day,

As a Savannah resident, Starland business owner, and 12-year employee of the SCCPSS, I'd like to voice my support for Ms. Warnekros and the proposed relocation of the Jinx in Starland. Ms. Warnekros has owned and operated multiple businesses in Savannah and the Jinx was a long-time success on Congress St for locals and visitors alike. I met my wife at the Jinx, played there countless times as a musician, and took my family there when they would visit. It was a wonderful institution that had a deep and lasting effect on local music. It deserves another shot in a new location and I enthusiastically urge you to approve them.

Sincerely,
Phillip Price

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to you today to support the construction and re-opening of The Jinx in Starland.

The Jinx has long been a home-base for many members of the Savannah community -- including myself -- and the owners and staff have always supported the community, local and touring musicians, nonprofits and residents and visitors.

Without The Jinx in Savannah, there has been a hole in our vibrant community. While other local venues exist, none have been able to completely fill that empty space and provide the same neighborhood vibe, stage and professional sound and light set up, and opportunity for small to mid-sized bands in addition to touring favorites that you'll never see in a venue that size.

As both a customer and a promoter who booked shows and events there, The Jinx re-opening in the Starland district is a welcome addition to the neighborhood and a long-awaited resurgence of our music scene. I look forward to its return.

Thanks,

Caila Brown

To whom it may concern,

I am writing you today to talk to you about The Jinx, it's legacy, the impact we've had in the community since the Jinx shut it's doors and the ray of hope that it will soon be back as a fixture in our community. When I first moved to Savannah I was looking for a place where I could not just catch good live music, but also somewhere that I could walk into and feel like I had a place I felt that I belonged, Thanks to Suzanne, Gil, Tony, Ritchie, Scotty, James, Amelia and anyone else that worked there as one point or another I found that love. When I first set foot into the Jinx I felt that it was exactly what I was looking for. The staff all looked after one another and their patrons. Through out the years I hosted, played and went to many shows at this place. Not only that, but the Jinx was famous for hosting memorials for people who had passed away in our community that really meant a lot to all of us. The Jinx closing was really hard on our community and still to this day I hear people talking about how much they miss the place, I know I do. I think the important thing to think about is how many of us miss our experiences at the Jinx. When the news broke that the Jinx would be closing it's doors, It was right in the middle of the pandemic. As if things weren't already, we all knew that things would be different. I remember an influx of pictures and memories had flooded the instagram for the Jinx. There were hundreds of posts and comments. Recently when news broke that the Jinx will once again be opening its doors in a new location, a lot of us let out a sigh of relief. I am writing to you today to say please bring back the Jinx. In town full of transplants, college students, artists, musicians and service industry workers we could all use a little taste of home.

Sincerely,
Joseph Kapcin

As a savannah native that grew up going to shows at The Jinx on Congress Street it broke my heart to see them close. As a teenager in the early 2000s I saw my first real concerts and learned the importance of an intimate musical experience. The owners and staff at The Jinx have been doing it for a long time and understand the importance of noise ordinances, ensuring civility and respect with the venue patrons, and being overall good Savannahians.

This venue will add a layer of Savannah music tradition to this area that is much needed.

To Whom it May Concern,

When I moved to Savannah in the Fall of 2007, I didn't have a sense of community or family. I drifted pretty aimlessly, was listless and lonely for a long time. I wanted to go home to Michigan.

It would be almost a year before I found myself on Congress Street being lured in by the sounds of live music. The guy at the door was intimidating looking. Easily 6ft plus, possibly 300 pounds and a booming voice. However, he had the kindest smile I'd seen in so long, I didn't hesitate to keep moving forward. I'll be forever grateful that I did. The Jinx had a huge impact on my life. I've seen some of the most epic concerts, played the best games and met some of the best people of my existence. It was a place that truly allows people to be themselves without judgement.

Allowing this family to reunite means more than I think most can understand. The amount of loss that we've all endured over the years should be soul-shattering to say the least. We've lost brothers, husbands, wives and mothers, yet always had the support of each other to rely on. The Jinx allowed those bonds to form. Even without a physical building, this places remains Home for so many.

I'll continue to show my support to them in whatever way I can.

Thank you for all the unforgettable memories and I look forward to all that is to come.

To Whom It May Concern,

My Name is Peterson Worrell and I have been a resident of Savannah since 2011. Slowly but surely, I have come to love Savannah over the last decade and the Jinx has played no small part in helping that to occur. While the Jinx may not have been the first place I frequented upon moving to Savannah, it was certainly the most influential and beneficial. Without that establishment, I would not have nearly as many connections and friendships as I do today. And that statement does not only include the locals of Savannah that I've been fortunate enough to befriend during my times at the Jinx, but also the employees of the Jinx itself (aka the Jinx Family).

Outside of those qualifications, The Jinx has routinely been a cornerstone of the music and art scenes of Savannah by offering a supportive environment that artists, both big and small, could utilize to express their art. I myself would not have started my journey as a musician had it not been for The Jinx. The loss of The Jinx impacted so many artists, both touring and local, that the music scene of Savannah itself has suffered a tremendous drop in burgeoning artists over the past few years.

Simply put, The Jinx is more than a place to get a drink. It is more than a place to watch bands. The Jinx represents one of the few bastions of Savannah that locals can meet to share joys and tears. It represents a safe and caring space to meet with others reminisce about older times. It represents the chance to meet new and fresh faces eager to weave themselves into the fabric of Savannah. The moniker of the "Jinx Family" extends so much further than just the staff of the establishment because for many Savannah locals, few places feel more like home than The Jinx.

With Best Regards,
Peterson I. Worrell

It is with great enthusiasm that I support The Jinx long awaited resurrection in the Starland District. The Jinx has been ground zero for the Savannah Music scene for many years. We have all missed the music, friends and family known as The Jinx 912. Susanne Warnekros and her team have proven their stewardship at their former spot on Congress Street downtown and will bring that same sensible responsibility to their new location in Starland. Architect Kevin Rose will ensure the success of The Jinx Starland Location just as he has with other projects in the same area and in downtown Savannah. Approve the plans and the special-use permit for alcohol sales and Let the Music Play On.

Please accept this letter as my written support for the reopening of The Jinx. For many years The Jinx served Savannah and our surrounding community well by providing live music for a variety of musicians and musical styles. It created a home for not only local rock and rolls acts but also served as a home for local hip hop musicians as well.

During the 2022 Georgia Legislative session a nonpartisan study group called The Joint Georgia Music Heritage Study Committee was formed. The purpose of this group was to learn how to encourage the music industry and music business to invest in Georgia and to promote Georgia's rich musical history. Reopening The Jinx would help fulfill this mission.

Savannah bills itself as an Art Centered City. Allowing The Jinx to reopen will only strengthen the Art community in Savannah.

To whom it may concern,

I am ecstatic for the prospect of The Jinx reopening in the Starland District. After many years of hosting bands in Savannah that nowhere else would host them, a void was left in Savannah when they closed that has only grown the scene around Savannah that called the Jinx their home for many years. I am excited to see a new and improved Jinx that will unite many of Savannah's alternative, rock/metal, punk scenes and beyond to add more variety to the music venues in the area.

In addition, Kevin Rose is a fantastic addition to the design team with a history of supporting our local music scene for decades. It will be exciting to see his take on the proposed plans for the new Jinx.

Thank you,

Matthew Price

I am writing in support of the re-opening of The Jinx here in Savannah. This establishment is more than just a bar; it's a community.

The Jinx meant, and means, a lot to many people in Savannah. It became a favorite place of mine from the first time I walked in the door. The owners and bartenders welcome everyone from all walks of life. It was a place where I felt camaraderie even with people I didn't know. When someone was in need of something these people backed them as much as possible.

Additionally, The Jinx brought so many great musical artists to town (when no other venue would) and fully supported the hometown musicians as well in many different ways other than just giving them a venue to play.

Please approve and support the re-opening of The Jinx. Savannah really needs a place like this.

Sincerely,

Timmy Welter

I was so excited when I heard that the Jinx planned to reopen in the Starland District. Many new businesses and chains have been moving in downtown and "up scaling" everything, so that many of the unique, magical places that make Savannah what it is, have been forced to close down or move to new locations. One of those locations is the Starland District. Starland is now where "local Savannah" lives. The artists, the dreamers, the real people who keep this town running when the tourists go home.

You could really feel the energy begin to shift from "local" to "tourist destination" in the downtown atmosphere when the Jinx closed. It was the first domino to fall in what feels like an over night transformation.

The Jinx is a real beacon of Savannah localness, and it's rebirth in Starland is not only eagerly welcomed, but desperately NEEDED in the renaissance that is local Savannah.

To whom it may concern:

As a lifelong Savannah resident and homeowner, I fully support re-opening the Jinx in its new location. Firstly, a lot of people want this. It the most beloved bar and live music venue in the city (as evidenced by the innumerable "best of" awards bestowed upon it). I'm sure you'll receive many testimonies about it being the heart of a community, a place where everyone was welcome and memories were made. Beyond that, the Jinx was and is run and staffed by good citizens: people who support numerous civic fundraisers, pay lots of tax revenue to the city, and follow the rules fastidiously r.e. alcohol and public safety.

Unlike other clubs and venues, The Jinx has always promoted a culture of community and respect for its patrons. It was a bar where I felt safe to go as a young woman. Belligerent or underage drinkers were not tolerated, the door was always monitored for capacity, and staff were professional about keeping the venue safe. I know this will continue to be a priority in the new location.

Please, please, give the people what they want! It's a safe, sound, mutually beneficial investment for the city to support the re-opening of the Jinx.

Thank you,

Greetings!

I am writing as a longtime resident of Savannah, active member of the arts community, and former employee of Susanne Warnekros, and fully endorse the approval of her ambitions regarding the establishment of a new business location in the Starland District.

The Jinx was a pivotal venue in Savannah's music scene for well over a decade, and it was my pleasure and honor to moonlight as an audio engineer for its diverse offerings. The staff and ownership were unmatched in their professionalism and ability to create a communal space for lovers of music that avoided the regular incidents of violence and other unlawful activity that I've seen so many other establishments in Savannah fall victim to.

Savannah is a town with many laurels in its cap; alongside food, history, art, Pride, and even St. Pat's, we are blessed with a vibrant music scene, and the Jinx was a legend in the Low Country and pivotal for the brands of music not generally found in your average music club.

I look forward to the opportunity to once again enjoy the company and atmosphere Susanne and her merry team have endeavored to bring to the area, and I hope you will support their vision. Thank you.

To the gatekeepers of the city,

More than just a rock n roll institution, The Jinx was a local's respite from the overwhelming tourist trap that has become downtown Savannah. Locals—their creativity, and support—are what make Savannah such a charming, intriguing destination.

When discerning visitors get to Savannah's cobblestone streets, they don't ask around for the best chain restaurants and overpriced bars with no ambiance—they ask where the locals go.

The Jinx.

It wasn't just the historical location on congress, it's the incredible people who ran it. Savvy, hard working, passionate locals created the Jinx. They know what works and what doesn't. They know what it takes to build a cultural institution, and how to support the community (visitors included) in the process.

While many great locally-owned bars and restaurants have opened in the last few years, none have managed to fill the void left by The Jinx closing. Savannah no longer has a midsized place to host touring acts and incredible live performances.

Allowing the brilliant local bar owners behind The Jinx the opportunity to recreate a beacon of Savannah culture won't only bolster the community, it'll also offer another reason to visit Savannah.

And who would want to deprive our magical city of a fine live music destination?

Sincerely,

Mariel Zayas-Bazan

To Whom It May Concern,

I'm writing this letter in complete support of The Jinx's new design and location. As a tax paying resident and homeowner of 25 years I love having entertainment options outside of the Landmark Historic District. That is available and easily accessible to locals where we aren't struggling to park nor dodging and endangering pedestrian tourists while looking for parking.

The Jinx also has sentimental value to my fiancé and I. We had our first real date there exactly ten years ago, and we will be getting married in October of this year at Victory North across the street. We booked our venue before we knew The Jinx might be coming to that location. I think that's serendipitous!

In fact The Jinx meant so much to us and our happy ten years together that we bought a piece of art from the owner after it closed to hang in our home because we were so heartbroken that it closed.

Furthermore, we've enjoyed so many amazing bands there that would never come to the Civic Center or new Arena which means we travel to Athens, GA, Columbia, SC, Asheville, NC, Charleston, SC to watch the types of bands The Jinx use to bring to Savannah. So we have clearly been taking our entertainment dollars outside of Savannah and Chatham County. Much like we use to do for our Sunday beer years ago when we'd have to go to SC to buy it.

Please pass this and allow them to reopen!!

I think it's a brilliant location and will be revitalizing an otherwise unsightly building.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely Yours,

To whom it may concern,

I am writing in support of The Jinx and owner Susan Warnekros. The new location in the Starland District will give many of us a home again after the abrupt closing in July of 2020. The jinx was an integral part of my and many's lives from 2004 to 2020. It was a meeting place, a refuge, and a true community. It has sorely been missed. Susan is a great businesswoman and deserves the go on this project.

To whom it may concern,

We must bring back The Jinx. They were pushed out and affected by woes of the pandemic after 9 years established and more under the name The Velvet Elvis in the same location. The Jinx provided community to our city, locals and tourist alike. Nothing has been able to consistently replace the bands or culture The Jinx brought to town. Please help us get it back.

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing to you on behalf of the Jinx, arguably one of the most important and unique establishments known to our city. The Jinx is an historical landmark, a bar and music venue that we locals can look on with a sense of pride and accomplishment for the creative endeavors that have and hopefully will continue to emanate from our city. Not only has the Jinx been known for the sense of community among local regulars, but, in a city that claims art as one of its flagship commodities, it also serves as a leader in supporting and perpetuating a scene devoted to original live music. In a city that derives so much of its income from tourism, the Jinx provides one of the rare spaces where original music can flourish and be heard by locals and tourists alike. Tourism might be at the heart of the local economy, but the charm of the city has always been and always will be in the unique creative spirit that dwells here.

Savannah NEEDS the Jinx.

The Starland District is a great location for their new venture and I hope that you will approve whatever they need in order to reopen their doors once again.

Sincerely,
Brandon Nelson McCoy

Hi,

The Jinx, and its preceding business The Velvet Elvis, have been a staple of the Savannah Music scene for my entire life. I grew up in Savannah, and played my first gig at 15...I'm 45 now and have essentially been playing there in many different bands over 30 years. The Jinx is an essential part of the fabric of Savannah music and provides local talent the opportunity to hone their skills and develop their sound. Not to mention, the touring acts that came through the jinx offered a variety of styles and music that everyone cherished in the community. Savannah misses the jinx. Savannah needs the Jinx. Savannah wants the Jinx.

Sincerely,
Josh Safer

It is with great enthusiasm that I support The Jinx long awaited resurrection in the Starland District. The Jinx has been ground zero for the Savannah Music scene for many years. We have all missed the music, friends and family known as The Jinx 912. Susanne Warnekros and her team have proven their stewardship at their former spot on Congress Street downtown and will bring that same sensible responsibility to their new location in Starland. Architect Kevin Rose will ensure the success of The Jinx Starland Location just as he has with other projects in the same area and in downtown Savannah. Approve the plans and the special-use permit for alcohol sales and Let the Music Play On.

I am available for any assistance or questions.

I couldn't think of a better fit for the new Jinx than this area. I wanted to write in to show my full support of this venture.

Good afternoon. After just now reading my mate Eric Curl's piece on Savannah Agenda, I feel compelled to share with you a little story about The Jinx. I met my partner of just about 10 years at the honkytonk happy hour. It was a Saturday toward the end of January.

She was actually on sort of a set-up date with some other dude. Part of the set-up, she was with a handful of friends. Turns out, some of those friends are friends of mine, too, so I ended up joining them for a few rounds. Long story short, nearly 10 years later she and I are still together.

I sure wish we could head to honkytonk happy hour Saturday to mark the anniversary, as I'm sure you wish to have a place to have a happy hour. I very much miss the coolest spot to see music in this town. Though it might not have the "cool" downtown address, it'd be very cool to me to be able to hit the place up without all the nonsense that Congress street can sometimes provide. Nothing against nonsense per se! I'd just be happy to have The Jinx in closer proximity to my place.

Anyways, hope you're doing well. Looking forward to buying myself, my friends, and The Jinx staff many shots of Turkey soon!

One of the saddest days of my memories was the day I found out "The Jinx" was closing.

I am not even a drinker, but this bar was where I could hear the music I love and more importantly, it was where I could go and hang out with all my friends. It was a second living room. A safe haven for someone who didn't want to go to a downtown tourist bar( though tourists were as welcome as anyone).

It looked rough, but "The Jinx" was the kindest most welcoming pub I have ever been to.

I hope this club will be given the opportunity to reopen.

Cheers

Keith Kozel

To whom it may concern,

My name is Stephen D. Cordrey, I have been a Savannah resident my entire life and a great portion of my adolescent and adult life were centered around the jinx. This particular venue had an sense of community unrivaled by anything I have ever found. The lose of this place was a great blow to a lot of hearts and minds but now you have the chance to help restore what was lost to a vast and diverse section of the low country. Bringing back the Jinx will bring many opportunities for local musicians to play alongside much larger national touring bands bringing attention to both the local artist and the city. Lastley the location in starland seems more than a perfect fit as the area has already become accustomed to live music of similar flavor and spirit all of which fall slightly short of bringing the same impact when compared to one show at the jinx.

Dear Metropolitan Planning Commission and Savannah City Council,

I am writing to express my support for The Jinx project's request for approval in beloved Starland district.

As a resident located at, 111 Windsor Rd Savannah, Georgia 31419, I believe that The Jinx's project will add to the culture, economic diversity and vibrancy of the community in the Starland district.

The Jinx has proven to be a staple to Savannah. To us, the home grown of Savannah, we would love to welcome back a safe space to share our love for music and locals. To those that are new to the Jinx, well they are in for a treat. I look forward to continuing to support this project. We are thrilled to see their addition continue to make Savannah a little better.

My best,
Monica Dutson

To whom it may concern,

I am writing to express my support for the reopening of The Jinx, a beloved bar in Savannah, GA. As a resident of Savannah, I was saddened to hear that The Jinx had closed its doors, as it had been a staple in the community for many years.

I have many fond memories of spending time at The Jinx with friends and family. The atmosphere was always welcoming and inclusive, and the staff was always friendly and attentive. In addition, the drinks were always top-notch.

One of the things I appreciate most about The Jinx is that it was a destination for both locals and tourists alike. Many of my relatives come to visit me, and The Jinx was always high on their list of things to do. They love the unique atmosphere and the great selection of drinks.

I believe that the reopening of The Jinx in a new location would be a great addition to the community. It would provide a much-appreciated gathering spot for residents and visitors alike, and would bring additional life to the Starland district.

I strongly encourage you to give The Jinx the opportunity to reopen in the new Starland location. I am confident that it will continue to be a beloved and cherished part of the Savannah community for many years to come.

Sincerely,
Evan Pope

To Whom it May Concern,

I was a regular patron of The Jinx for ten of its final years. I played and watched many shows there, met lifelong friends there, mourned lost loved ones, had a place to go eat Thanksgiving when I couldn't fly home, and crafted memories that will live on in my mind until the day I die. People in world touring bands remember the bar fondly. Grammy award winning artists got their start in that bar. It won best bar and best bar staff from Connect Savannah for so long it drove other bars crazy, which is in no small part due to the dedication of the community who supported it, as much as the staff who crafted those experiences. Savannah needs The Jinx back to inspire another generation of musicians and artists as it has so many before. It will be a great addition to the Starland District, a neighborhood that housed so many of the staff and patrons over the years. Thanks for reading and considering this letter.

Hey,

I lived in Savannah for 6 years and the Jinx was always like a second home to me. It literally held the soul of the city. The people, the music and the decor was iconic to say the least. Now all the way in Atlanta people still talk of that bar and how much they miss it. I look for bars like the Jinx in every city I travel to across the country. Hearing its reopening and in Starlandia is so exciting to hear. The River District is this sad stain of corporate capitalism in Savannah we need the Jinx back and we need it badly.

Hey hope this email helps out.

I'm a concert promoter in the Savannah Georgia area and really believe this new venue for the Jinx will be a great addition to the music scene. There are a lot of people in the midtown and Southside part of Savannah that prefer to not go downtown because of parking and commute. Having the new Jinx open up in more of midtown area will be a great thing for us on the other side of town. Also because of the size of the venue, we will be able to post more national acts that are on tour that may not have an opportunity to perform in Savannah. I fully support the opening of the new Jinx and hope that it gets the support it needs.

To whom it may concern,

The Jinx was crucial to original bands in Savannah. They were the only venue where an original band could play original music. Almost every other venue required a 3 hr set which original new bands almost never have. Generally, they'd only have at the most 90 minutes, probably only 30. Losing the Jinx was crippling to the songwriting/composing community and we need them back.

The Jinx was one of the first music venues I discovered when I moved to Savannah in 2011. What great nights we had there! We would drop in about 10pm in thrilling suspense about what music would be presented.

We mourned its passing until recently when we heard about the new location. It makes good sense. The whole music scene is gravitating towards Starland so people can wander in and out of several venues close enough for walking.

Please give us The Jinx back.

I recently heard news that the Jinx may be reopening in the Starland district. Savannah is in sore need of a serious music venue for underground music especially. Soon after I moved to the area in 2005, I found out just how important that venue was to people who loved to hear new, original music by artists both semi-famous and underground/independents. Any city that wishes to lay claim to any legitimacy artistically needs a music venue like the Jinx. Not everyone's tastes and creative needs can be satisfied by the most generic, main stream music. As of this writing, the only venue in town for independent music with a decent sound system is the Wormhole. A city like Savannah is big enough for more than one decent venue. Besides what local talent already exists in town, Savannah also benefits from a constant influx of creative musicians via SCAD. The Jinx was one place where people knew they could get their original music out there and heard to receptive ears. Please bring the Jinx back!

Hi,

I was writing in order to add support for The Jinx. I was never able to go when it was originally open, since I turned 21 during 2020. I have heard nothing but great things from my coworkers and wish nothing more than to be a regular there.

Best,
Francis

To whom this may concern:

The Jinx is not a bar. It's a family, it's a safe place; It's Home. When I first moved to Savannah, this was the very first business I walked in and I never left, or yet, it never left me. When I found myself involved in an horrible, life taking accident, it was The Jinx and the family they created that came together to help me get back on my feet metaphorically, physically, and financially. They created fundraisers in the physical building as well as providing help outside there heart-filled wall. To have The Jinx back in Savannah would mean putting the heart back in the city. Please grant The Jinx the honor of breaking ground in the Starland District because not only is it an honor for them to be able to rebuild, it would be an honor as a community to have this amazing place back in all of our lives.

Thank you.

My name is Alexis Perez (AJ) and I've been a resident of Savannah for 22+ years, primarily residing in the 31401 zip code for 90% of my time here. I am a cofounder of Sulfur Studios/Arts Southeast that is located in StarLand and I am sharing this info to let you know that I fully support the new iteration of the Jinx opening up in our neighborhood.

I have been a patron of The Jinx for a majority of its inception, primarily attending Hip Hop Night that ran every Tuesday (excluding some holidays) for over 15 years. Suzanne, Tony, Gil and company have always made me feel welcome. I have seen some amazing shows there over the years including their annual and epic Halloween festivities.

Again, I am in full support of their re-opening in StarLand.

Thank you for your time in advance.

To whom it may concern,

The Jinx was/is one of Savannah's greatest cultural landmarks. The perfect synthesis of the of all of the city's desire for inclusiveness and independence spirit. I have so many fond memories of the Jinx from my (now) wife and I's second date ever on hip hop night to all of the best metal, punk and rock shows I've seen there and all the friends I made in between.

Keep the Jinx alive!

To whom it may concern,

From your local Savannah resident, we would love to have the Jinx return to our town. It brought so much variety to everyone, locals, tourist and anyone to seems to just visit town even if you were a short drive away. It was a great venue for all events and would be a great asset to have it back in the area. Starland yard is up and coming and the perfect spot to host the new location.

Thank you for considering the new location for many of us locals here.

30 years ago when my parents retired to plain boring Hilton Head, I started coming to explore Savannah. The southern food and the chill music scene kept me coming back. Eventually on one of my visits I discovered the Jinx- it's truly what hooked me on moving here as soon as my parents really needed help.

Six years ago I had to make the big move here from Hawaii to help the parents- and the Jinx helped me see I was right where I needed to be. The Jinx hosted crazy eccentric acts and seriously talented artists all in the same funky place where you had to walk past the stage to take a leak.

I loved the Jinx for helping get music festivals going in Savannah like the Stopover fest which brings a lot of money to Savannah!

The Jinx should be a protected cultural building block of Savannah-

When I first moved to Savannah back in 2017, The Jinx was one of the first places I was brought to by a new friend. I was immediately hooked, it felt like home in an unknown city. I would frequent The Jinx often to hang out with my friends and listen to good music. It was the place I wanted to be on the weekends. I currently live in the Starland area so having the new Jinx close to home would be out of this world! I am looking forward to being able to go back to the place that welcomed me without hesitation.

As a native Savannahian, I love this city - despite moving away 10 years ago.

Since I've left, I've realized one thing about real cultural epicenters domestic and abroad - that they have accessible culture. Places precisely like the Jinx.

If Savannah wants to be a true cultural center, it's through the things that make it unique - Vinnie Van Gogo's, Forsyth, Bonaventure and yes, the Jinx. A Banana Republic can be anywhere and I think Savannah needs more cultural assets to sustain amplify the commerce.

Whenever I return home to Savannah, it's these cultural landmarks are on my agenda. And they're why I'll keep returning.

I know this new location for the Jinx would be a huge boon for the city.

To whom it may concern,

I am a longtime resident of Savannah and when I think of drinking in Savannah, only one bar comes to mind. That bar is the Jinx. The Jinx was a safe haven for outcasts and those of us who did not fit in at other bars. Inside those doors, there was nothing but love. The staff and the patrons are always welcoming.

I am asking that the Jinx be allowed to reopen in Starland. For us to be able to experience the Jinx again after it's absence would be greatly appreciated. No bar I've ever been to has the same feel. It's closing has left a void in the city that has never been filled. Please understand how important an accepting environment is for us. Since the Jinx closed, the live music scene in Savannah has died down as well.

Please allow the Jinx to reopen,
Jayson Bowers

While it has been some years since I have been in Savannah - I have incredibly fond memories of the nightlife from my time at school there. Friendships, relationships, stories that will last forever were all born from walking up and down Congress St all night long. One of the places that stands out as one of the most memorable in my mind is the Jinx. It was a venue/dance hall with the ability to bring together people from every corner of the city in an unlikely place to have a good time.

While the city has changed much from what I can tell, and benefitted much from reorganization of the way districts are utilized and the growth that that entails - I would urge you to remember that we need to hold on to what got the city to this point. We need to hold onto what makes Savannah Savannah.

The Jinx is that.

In a time when violent crime is high in Savannah, when the world is recovering from a pandemic, and all of the social anxiety that comes with that. We need places like this. Places that really bring people together in safe spaces for the benefit of consumers, business owners, artists, and the neighborhoods in which these things exist.

Please return the Jinx to us.

To whom it may concern.

I'd like to take a moment to express my voice to be heard. I've got so many good memories of being introduced to new music at the previous JINX location.

Bands, I've never heard of and bands that I didn't think I had a chance to ever experience live. I saw bands that my friends were in. I saw bands that were heavy-metal. I saw bands that were country music generated. I saw hip-hop bands, I saw jam bands. I saw bands dressed up like spaceman. I saw bands that had 15 members. I saw bands That were just one guy playing four or five instruments.

I took my family to see bands when they came to town. I went and saw bands when I didn't even know who they were, but I just didn't have anything else to do. I always checked the newspaper, I know I'm old, to see what bands were playing the upcoming weekend. I would sometimes go out of my way to walk home so that I walk by the front door of the JINX so that I could hear what band was playing. I like going to see bands I hope that I can go see bands at the JINX again, soon. The music scene of a city is like an appendage to the tourism industry of that city. So you need a place, like the JINX that will put bands on the stage. Live music is important. Bands are important. The jinx is important. Savannah needs the JINX

To Whom it May Concern,

I am writing in support of the new location for The Jinx in the Starland District. I spent many years watching and discovering some of my favorite bands at The Jinx on Congress St. It's difficult to describe in writing, but I have lived in many cities and it is not often you find a venue and group of people as special as The Jinx and their staff. I have watched in person and from afar how they have developed a local creative and welcoming community, while being a favorite venue among national touring artists. While living away from Savannah, everytime I would bring up that I had lived there to a musician their first response would be "I love The Jinx."

My wife and I moved back to Savannah and purchased a house two years ago. One of the things I looked forward to the most was being able to see some of my favorite bands in what most people would describe as "the perfect sized venue." A few months before we were scheduled to move, I saw that The Jinx was closing their doors, through no fault of their own, as a commercial casualty of Covid. I have visited every bar/venue in and around the city since moving back, and I can say confidently there's not a single place that offers everything The Jinx does. I am astounded at the revitalization of the Starland District, and know that the Jinx would only add to that in a positive way.

Thank You,

I first came to Savannah in 2016 to see a band play at a small venue in a town I had only wondered about. In truth, if I didn't have the tickets, I probably wouldn't have come here at all. I like to stick to my local scene, and small counter culture community. I like to keep things small and comprehensive. Eight years later, I'm still here, no longer an outsider, I consider myself a local, more of a transplant, but well grown into this place and I have roots here now.

Long before it was a tourist destination, Savannah was a town, just like any other town in its day. These days it's maybe considered a city, if anything it's well on its way. From an outside view, it's beloved for its architecture and rich history - people come here to get married, see ghosts, learn about early American settlement and industry. We have impressive churches and the unique squares that really identify Savannah as something different, and there's no wondering why people want to come here. It's a beautiful place to be and a great place to live. You can't just plant these seeds one day and get hundred year old oaks the next day.

Whether it's a city, or a town isn't important, what's important is that Savannah is not just a tourist destination. It's a place where people live. While tourism supports our economy and allows for businesses to exist that really couldn't exist in anything but a tourist town, there are still locals here that need something else that tourism can't offer. We need places that are not designed to capitalize off of tourism, but rather look beyond our community to bring other communities in. We look beyond the local community to enrich our lives.

The Jinx offers something to the local community that the hundreds of tourism shops can't offer. It plays a role vital to the larger American culture, not just our local Savannah, bringing in often little known bands from other places to play at a smaller, more intimate venue. And more important than its role in the great American tradition of crossbreeding localities, the Jinx has grown to be important to our community. It allows us locals a place to go that isn't full of strangers, a place to go where you can meet some people that you can hope to see again, and meet some new ones here and again. That's how people have connected for years and years. That's what the Jinx offers to our city, or town, or whatever it is. It's more than just another bar, it's a missing staple of the community, and it's moving inland, where it ought to be. - away from the tourism, into an area where locals commune to escape tourism.

The Jinx was a place I could always count on finding my friends, and I didn't have many in my life until I very first went there. All the people I can call my friends and even perhaps family I met there. That may sound facetious but it's not. The people there helped me through some rough times and were always part of the best times.

It has become very difficult, almost impossible, to see live music without going to a theatre or a specific large venue location. Even then the genres tend to be vary limited with few truly local acts. The Jinx always supported home grown artists which allowed Savannah's vibrant music scene a chance to flourish. They also were able to bring in very well known and very diverse acts from all over the country, and some from the globe, because of the pull and respect The Jinx had as a venue. The difference between seeing a legendary show in a room of around 30 people is so wildly different than seeing them in a theatre setting or a stadium. With all that said the thing that separated The Jinx from other bars and pubs was the passion. There has been nothing like it since and the city of Savannah is much worse off for its loss.

I find it very sad that a locally owned business with all the history that came with it was ousted by parties from New York. That may seem unrelated but this is hardly the only case and why the historic district of Savannah is losing its rare qualities that once made it unique.

I will always love the friends and camaraderie from the patrons and staff of The Jinx. There are none better.

Please allow The Jinx project to proceed. Kevin Rose is a personal friend and an excellent and diligent architect. I am sure all the necessary changes were made. Additionally, The Jinx has been a community institution for many years. I've only lived in Savannah for eight years, and I can't think of a single location that brings music lovers in this community together.

To whom it may concern,

I moved to Savannah, GA in 1998 and instantly found my people at the Jinx (then the Velvet Elvis). If you were to ask me "what's your favorite bar in Savannah?". I would answer "hand downs, the Jinx." I saw countless bands play there and I been friends with members of the staff for nearly the entire time living here. If I had reasons to celebrate, I ended up at the Jinx. If we needed to mourn the loss of a loved one, we went to the Jinx. When the Jinx closed I felt as if Savannah had lost piece of it's identity, it's culture. I know the pandemic caused many businesses in Savannah to close. But let's not let that be the end of an important Savannah institution like the Jinx. Please, resurrect the Jinx.

Thank you,

To whom it may concern,

The Jinx is not just a cherished institution in Savannah but it's beloved across the country. My name is Julie Bluebell from Keene, NH and I support the Jinx all the way from up here in freezing cold New England. My husband and I first went to the Jinx on our honeymoon in 2018 as we chose the city of Savannah as our destination. Jinx was everything we could have hoped for having a good and safe time. Staff were professional and friendly and we enjoyed the menu. It was one of the highlights of our trip. I loved it so much when I was driving through Georgia for a work trip in early 2020, I made sure to put time in the schedule to visit Savannah just to have another amazing night at Jinx. We stopped in on the way down and had a great time at a locals night that couldn't have been more fun. And on the return trip we decided we had to go back to Savannah to stop by the Jinx again and enjoy the city's nightlife again and it was great timing. We were there in early March 2020 and the Jinx was participating in the amazing Savannah Stop Over. Thanks to the staff telling me about the event, I bought tickets for myself and everyone with me and we spent the weekend in and out of the Jinx and the other amazing venues that participated. Days later the world went into lockdown for the pandemic. My experience in Savannah at the Jinx during the Stop Over in 2020 has held such a special place in my heart since then. The Jinx helped the city showcase amazing local and national acts that I still listen to and try to see when they're up around here. Those memories of music and community will last with me a lifetime. I was devastated to hear of the closing of its original location that I'd grown to love. I wish them nothing but the best and am happy to help support their revival. Thank you to the Jinx and the best of luck for every manifestation of it in the future. Savannah is lucky to have the Jinx.

Feel free to email me for any further questions or comments about my experience getting Jinxed. Thank you for your time.

To Whom it may concern,

The Jinx has been a part of the Savannah punk and metal scene for many years and has been sorely missed these past few years. Starland is the perfect place for the new location and I fully support it.

Hi I'm Miki, when I moved to Savannah, one of the first places I asked about was The Jinx and was pretty excited to live in the same town ! but then I heard it had closed! I can not wait for it to reopen it's legendary for some of the best shows in the country and a must have for the local scene as well! Welcome Back! Mik

To whom it may concern:

Few things on social media bring me joy these days, but reading that The Jinx was making a comeback delighted me. I don't live in Savannah, but I'm there at least three weeks a year and not being able to have a drink in the one spot that made Savannah like I found my city has been heartbreaking. I planned a whole trip to Savannah just to have a Jameson and grab a couple of shirts the last week they were open and I will plan another to be there the week of their reopening. As a Georgian, I love the southern charm and history of Savannah, but the Jinx is where I fell in love with the city. It was home to a whole culture and that culture wants it back. Even the tourists.

The jinx was my "cheers" . There is nothing like everyone knowing your name. Look forward to your return and more locally owned businesses.

You know, it's funny. I had been going to the Jinx before it was the Jinx. I was an avid Velvet Elvis patron and just kept going when it changed.

Then my husband and I made that one of our places after we got married. The Jinx became an anniversary staple along with Kevin Barry's. Now, they are both gone.

We are so thrilled with THE JINX opening again. We never go downtown for our anniversary anymore. It's just not the same. We miss seeing Tony and the rest of the staff. Traditions are set for a reason.

I look forward to starting OUR tradition back up again soon. We can't wait to see you!!
